We will give our best".

Chef John Lee, Sushi Marché.

"A few shelves of Japanese groceries and sushi supplies line one wall of this modest take out joint on a quickly gentrifying strip of Queen East. There's no point buying mere supplies, though, with John Lee, Leslieville's very own Iron Chef (he trained under Masaharu Morimoto in Philadelphia), at the counter. Lee's sushi leaves in plastic takeout containers, but with considerable flair: purple orchid blooms, perhaps, or razorthin citrus wedges and edible shiso leaves, all adding appetizeing allure to his interesting bites."

TORONTO LIFE

"Start by getting about 23 years of experience under your belt learning from some of the best in your field like Iron Chef Masaharu Morimoto (at Morimoto in Philadelphia). Make connections to obtain the best ingredients. Set up shop in a busy but still affordable neighbourhood. Keep it simple and do what you know. Work your ass off. Six months later the word of mouth has them pounding down the door. Mind you, it's tough to spread word of mouth when your gob's full of such high-quality, affordable sushi and sashimi. While Marché's prices are competitive with other sushi takeouts, the composition and freshness stand out. "

NOW MAGAZINE

"Sushi is tasty, to go or to admire."
